

The kits offer 15 activities in three sections: wetlands, animal life, and restoring wetlands. They contain unusual items such as bird skulls and feet that would be difficult for elementary school teachers to obtain. Activities are also cross-curricular, incorporating language arts, social science, and mathematics as well as science and environmental education. Many of the lessons contain extension activities that promote community action. Introductory workshops for teachers are offered at a variety of sites.

Kits are free within established loan site areas. The convenience of these kits makes them extremely useful to teachers, who have limited time and budgets and might not otherwise be able to effectively instruct their students about wetlands ecosystems.
